PERSONAL GRUDGE CAUSED SHOOTING FARMER HANGS SELF AFTER INTIMATING FAMILY DEATH PACT

RAILROAD OFFICER MURDERS SUPERIOR AND KILLS HIMSELF

Double Tragedy Was Premeditated Police Believe

BALTIMORE, Sept. 24.—Long smoldering personal antagonism was set down today as the underlying cause of the dramatic killing of Maxwell C. Byers, president of the Western Maryland Railroad, by Dudley G. Gray, vice president in charge of traffic, who then shot himself.

Investigation into the double tragedy was still incomplete today, but the investigators had learned enough of the personal relationship between the two men to put the shooting down to a long-nursed grudge. They had been associated for fifteen years.

Gray entered Byers' office yesterday, discussed traffic conditions for a brief period, and then suddenly employees in the outer office were startled to hear a fusillade of shots. Byers was shot eight times, four times in the abdomen, three times in the chest, and one bullet penetrated his right arm.

Two wounds were found on Gray's body, one near the heart causing death.

An official statement from the railroad offices said: "While they frequently differed sharply on matters of policy in connection with the company's affairs, we never knew them to have any personal differences."

Gray was still conscious when employees rushed into the office of President Byers.

Asked "Who did this?" Gray responded: "Isn't it obvious?" and then lapsed into unconsciousness, from which he never emerged. He died a few hours later at Mercy Hospital.

One .32 calibre automatic was found on the floor of the office, near Gray's body, and another was found in his pocket at the hospital. Both guns had been used in the sudden outburst of shooting.

Officials of the company said today they had never known Gray to carry a gun. Evidently the tragedy was the result of some premeditation on the part of Gray, but there was no hint of its before-hand.

His associates said he had been his usual cheerful self during the morning that preceded the shooting.

A widow and five sons survive the dead president of the road, who was known for his "hard-boiled" stand against the strikers on his road in the 1922 rail strike.

Mrs. Gray, who was visiting in Columbus, O., at the time of the shooting, arrived here today to take charge of her husband's body. She was to be questioned later.

NOTE IMPROVEMENT IN IRON AND STEEL DEMAND FOR WEEK

Month Showing Gain Over August; Slow But Sure

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 24.—Sustained improvement, although not rapid, in iron and steel demand with much of the betterment represented by future commitments rather than orders for current shipment will be noted by the Iron Age tomorrow in its weekly summary of the iron and steel trade.

Aggregate specifications are averaging close to 15 per cent higher than in August and for some steel sales, offices are running ahead of the volume of a year ago.

Obscurity of the full extent of gain in steel released is due to the tardy response of ingot output to expanding rolling mill schedules. Current steel ingot output at 65 per cent compares with 58 per cent in the two previous weeks.

Growing interest in forward buying has stiffened finished steel prices. Among the heavier rolled products, bars are showing greater strength with 1.65c a lb., Pittsburgh. Representing an advance of $1 a ton, more commonly quoted. Structural shapes are up $1 a ton to 1.70c a lb., Bethlehem.

Basic iron has declined $1 a ton and other grades have dropped 50c a ton in the valleys, while at Ohio river points and other northern consuming center southern iron heretofore held a $12, Birmingham, has receded to $11.50. Scrap markets are irregular.

Declines in pig iron at Pittsburgh and at Birmingham for northern shipment bring the Iron Age composite price down to $14.46 a gross ton, the lowest figure since late in 1915.

An advance on black sheets of $1 a ton raises the finished steel composite price from 2.142c to 2.149c a lb.

Stockholders Sued; Ask Hearing On Junk's Note

WASHINGTON, C. H., O., Sept. 24.—Testimony of Mal S. Daugherty, who was president of the defunct Ohio State Bank, and of O. C. Gray, Columbus, state superintendent of banks, is scheduled to feature today's session of the Fayette County grand jury which is probing conditions surrounding the recent failure here of the Ohio State and the Peoples' and Drovers' Banks.

Daugherty was to have appeared before the jurors Tuesday but the investigation proceeded slower than was anticipated. Gray is supervising his department's liquidation of the affairs of the two banks.

Attorney Joseph McGhee, Columbus, former attorney general of Ohio, representing a group of depositors in the Ohio State Bank, testified before the grand jury Tuesday.

On behalf of superintendent Gray, attorney General Gilbert Bettman filed suit against seven stockholders of the Peoples' and Drovers' bank for the amount of the liability based upon their ownership of stock in the bank.

Bettman, also, asked for as early a hearing as possible of Gray's suit against Elmer Junk, farmer and former County Commissioner, to collect on a $7,500 note given by Junk to the Ohio State Bank. Junk claimed the note was an "accommodation note" and that he received no cash.

WOMAN SHOTS TO FRIGHTEN; FACES MURDER

Shot Kills Husband's Sweetheart; He Refuses Help

LAPLATA, Md., Sept. 24.—A shot Mrs. Lulu M. Gamble, 45, is said to have admitted she fired to "frighten" her husband and his girl friend but which fatally wounded the girl, held her today on a charge of murder. She is the mother of ten children.

Mrs. Elsie Davis, 22, the other woman, died after lingering between life and death since Friday. Mrs. Gamble confronted Mrs. Davis and Gamble as they sat in the latter's machine near the Gamble home here.

The wife told a coroner's jury she "didn't mean to kill" Mrs. Davis and only fired to scare her from her husband. Gamble was the chief witness against his wife and he announced he would not aid her in financing her defense. He is a prosperous farmer and keeper of bees here.

Mrs. Davis' husband is serving a sentence on a road gang in Virginia for violating the prohibition laws, guards took him to his wife's bedside in a Washington hospital before she died but she did not recognize him.

FINGER PRINTS TO TELL CHARACTER

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 24.—A finger print system whereby innate character traits can be determined and diagnosed was being examined with much interest here today by local police and state penitentiary officials.

Carl I. Sherwood, the inventor, a trustee at the Roseville brick plant, claims that by his "dactylanalysis system," which he has recently perfected after a long period of research in the library of the criminal identification bureau, he can unerringly read a person's character tendencies by their fingerprint impressions.

The convict, who was formerly an employee of the state bureau of criminal identification, was sentenced to serve from two to twenty years for an automobile theft. He has offered the results of his study to the Ohio penal welfare commission.

CASE OF INFANTILE PARALYSIS CAUSES CLASS DISMISSAL

Third Grade Class At McKinley Closed; Now Seven Cases

As a precautionary measure, due to the fact a new case of infantile paralysis has been reported, children of the third grade, taught by Miss Marjorie Douthett, of McKinley School, were dismissed Tuesday morning for one week. The new case is that of Billy Harvey, 8, son of Mr. and Mrs. Everett Harvey, Trumbull St., a pupil in Miss Douthett's room.

The action of dismissing the third grade was taken after James D. Adair, president of the Xenia City School Board, had received the following letter from Dr. T. F. Myler, chairman of a special commission of doctors to make an investigation of the paralysis epidemic.

Mr. James D. Adair, Pres. Xenia City School Board, Xenia, O.

Dear Mr. Adair:

As chairman of the Greene County Commission for the study of infantile paralysis I would like to make the following recommendations for the prevention of further spread of the disease in McKinley school.

1. Dismiss third grade for one week.

2. Send a letter to the parents of these children, asking them to keep their children at home, and to have no contact with other children.

3. Have city nurse take temperatures of all other children in the McKinley School every day for a week. Any child showing a temperature above 99 degrees should be sent home, and such child should be readmitted to school only with a physician's certificate, that such child is not suffering

Gray, 62, right, first vice president of the line, are dead in Baltimore, Md., as the result, police say, of a murder and suicide in Byers' office. He said he often had met the little girl on the street and had become friendly with her. Police later said they doubted Myers' confession, believing him insane.

Police stated this morning that they had been unable to discover a motive for the planting of a bomb in the machine. They said that as far as could be determined Barnes had no enemies.

THREE ACCUSED OF SHORTAGE FOUND IN NEW YORK BUREAU

Learn Of Peculation Of Court Funds; Hold Suspects

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—New York's courts swayed today with a new scandal, following the holding of three city employees on charges of grand larceny. They were accused of a shortage in the accounts of the alimony bureau of the family court.

One of the three accused men told authorities he had loaned $4,500 of the amount to Edwin J. Cooley, former chief of the court of General Session Probation bureau. Cooley was recently acquitted of falsifying bureau records.

Meanwhile it was announced that the city's inquiry into magistrates' court will be extended to include all lawyers in these courts. Referee Samuel Seary will begin the magistrates investigation on Monday.

The extraordinary grand jury which indicted four persons in the investigation of charges that former Magistrate George F. Ewald paid $10,000 for his seat on the bench was to resume its deliberations today.

Strangled Wife And Children Before Committing Murder; Hanged Self From Barn Rafter; Crime Occurred Sunday

YORK, Pa., Sept. 24.—Desperate over financial difficulties, Harry Dietrich, 40, a farmer near Spry, seven miles south of here, killed his wife and four children with an axe and then hanged himself from a rafter in his barn, it was disclosed here today.

Dietrich left a note in which he said "financial worry" motivated his action and that the family had "decided to die together."

First word of the slaying reached here late last night after Jacob Epply, Spry merchant, went to the Dietrich farm to learn why an order for potatoes had not been delivered to him Saturday.

In the barn, Epply found Dietrich's body suspended from a rafter. The bodies of Mrs. Dietrich and the children, Mabel 11, Paul, 10, Anna, 8, and John, 5, lay in the kitchen of the farmhouse. All had been killed by blows from an axe.

The slaying evidently took place Sunday night, Coroner I. U. Zech said today after he had visited the farm and investigated.

The coroner said that the farmer evidently had strangled his family with binder twine and after they had become unconscious had killed them with an axe.

AMATEUR GOLF MEET UNDER WAY; FOURTH TITLE LURES JONES

Johnston Loses Out; Willing And Little In First Match

(BULLETIN)
MERION CRICKET CLUB, SOUTH ARDMORE, Pa., Sept. 24.—Bobby Jones this morning won his first round match in the national amateur championship tournament, defeating Ross Somerville by five up and four to play.

MERION CRICKET CLUB, SOUTH ARDMORE, Pa., Sept. 24.—After a hysterical qualifying round which resulted in an overnight playoff and the medal going to the man who deserved it, Bobby Jones, the national amateur golf champion, definitely got under way this morning with his thirty-two survivors meeting each other in the first round of eighteen holes.

A second round—of this quick death variety—will be played this afternoon and, if the great Jones is still in the tournament by nightfall, it was conceded that thereafter there would be almost no tournament.

Jones, having won the British amateur, the British open and the American open this year, was after his fourth major championship in this tournament and the general idea here was that, if he didn't get it, it would be Jones' fault and not that of any man who might beat him. Much of his problem was solved overnight when Harrison Johnston, the 1929 champion, failed to qualify among many good ones who failed to qualify.

The first match this morning featured Dr. O. F. Willing, 1929 finalist and Lawson Little, conqueror of Johnny Goodman, who conquered Jones in the championship last year.

It "seems perfectly foolish to get excited over the Soviet transactions, since every other wheat gambler, including the Federal Farm Board itself, has been doing the same thing," said Brookhart.

"The Soviets, I understand sold about 7,000,000 bushels shot in four successive days, when the total sales were over 200,000,000 bushels. The Soviet dealings were but a drop in the bucket."

"The real remedy is not to punish the Soviets but to prohibit grain speculation and gambling in the prices of farm products. The Caraway bill provided the real remedy. I believe now there is a real chance to pass that bill."

Senator Brookhart (R) of Iowa, who has introduced a bill outlawing short sales in the stock markets, said he expected the Soviet dealings would aid in enacting the Caraway bill.

Senator Caraway (D) of Arkansas, who drafted the bill outlawing gambling in grains, announced he did not look upon the Soviet transactions as particularly important.

The committee report will not be drawn until after the inquiry is concluded into the Soviet wheat transactions.

SKINNER LAST BROADWAY STAR TO HEED CALL OF HOLLYWOOD

OTIS SKINNER

By PAUL SHINKMAN
Central Press Staff Writer
NEW YORK, Sept. 24—He sat in a massive armchair with the late afternoon light streaming over his shoulder . . . streaming through the tall windows of one of those lofty-ceilinged apartments in the stateliest of New York.

He was taking in an even voice, pausing now and then to stroke meditatively the silver hair or gaze into the empty fire-place beside him.

Otis Skinner, exalted dean of American actors . . . just back from his first ordeal before the sight-and-sound battery of the Hollywood movie mills. Otis Skinner, last of America's grand old actors in the traditional line . . . and last to heed the call of Hollywood.

"Seven weeks of grueling work before the cameras—and now a welcome rest," the distinguished player was saying. "For the first time in years, no new play or film to think about. Just a long-awaited rest of the kind I've always wanted . . . up at a little cottage in Vermont."

A VETERAN STAR
Otis Skinner gazed thoughtfully at one of the stilled which showed him in a magnificent scene from the new film—"Kismet." Perhaps he was thinking of that memorable Christmas night nearly two decades ago at New York's glamorous old Knickerbocker Theater . . . State carriages drawing up at the door to rescue their aristocratic owners from the after-theater crush . . . Everywhere the babble of excited voices.

"Kismet! Otis Skinner! It had been a great evening. But little did those first-nighters realize that that night there was born one of the greatest stage alliances in the history of the American theater. For the ravishing "Oriental melodrama" by Edward Knoblock had made its American bow with Skinner in the leading role (Haji) . . . And the combination was hailed as perfect.

ALLEGES FRAUD IN DIVORCE; DEMANDS DECREE BE VACATED

Charging the divorce obtained by her husband last May 15 on alleged grounds of wilful absence from home for more than three years was granted without her knowledge that a suit had even been filed and that the decree was obtained by false allegations, Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Bigger has filed suit in Common Pleas Court to have the decree set aside and seeks to be restored to her former marriage status as the wife of Warner K. Bigger, this city, retired lieutenant in the United States navy.

Contrary to her husband's affidavit that his wife had been wilfully absent for the last three years, the plaintiff makes the counter claim they lived together as man and wife up to February 9 when the defendant abandoned her and then sued for divorce March 11, about a month later.

They were married January 22, 1919 at New York City but have no children.

Mrs. Bigger declares in her suit that on last June 4 she learned for the first time from a friend that her husband had procured a divorce from her and that at no time has she ever received a notice or service of summons.

The charge is also made Bigger sought to obtain service by publication in a newspaper of limited circulation, whereas he knew his wife was residing at 398 Park Ave., Rutherford, N. J., and did so until last February 18; that he knew the address of her mother was 345 E. 205th St., Bronx, New York, and that he knew their official address as given in the navy department at Washington, D. Xenia Singer To Compete In 1930 Radio Audition

MISS Eleanor McDonnell, this city, winner of the southern Ohio district Atwater Kent radio audition in 1929, will participate in the fourth national radio audition to be conducted this year by the Atwater Kent Foundation of Philadelphia. It is being announced. Dates for the audition have not been set.

It was at first thought that Miss McDonnell, who is being entered by the Xenia Women's Music Club, would not be eligible to enter the audition this year, having participated in last year's contest, but upon inquiry the Xenia club has learned that she may take part.

After participants in the audition are selected from each city or community they compete in the state audition, in which a young man and a young woman are selected to participate for each state in a geographical district audition. There are five districts. Again a young man and a young woman are selected to represent each district in the national finals held in New York in December, when their competition is broadcast from coast to coast.

In the national finals prizes aggregating $25,000 cash and ten mu-

Bellbrook News

A complete birthday surprise which caused the surprised one to lose his voice for a few moments, was the lot of our village clerk and thirty-three degree member of the local Euchre Club, James Crowl, on last Thursday night, when a number of his friends, a majority of whom were members of the above-named organization, assembled at his home on North West St. and informed him that he had reached the seventy-fifth mile-stone along life's tempestuous journey. The victim of the plot was successfully kept "down town" until all the plans and specifications for the coming drama were completed. When the "string was pulled," he found himself in a well-lighted room surrounded by a crowd of happy, cheerful friends, who at once proceeded to bombard him with the ordinary stunts on such occasions. Mr. Crowl, who always had contended that a surprise of this nature never could be pulled off him, "gave in the corn" and said it was a complete piece of work—that he did not have the slightest suspicion that anything of the kind was being planned. When his voice was sufficiently restored so as to make himself understood, he ordered out the euchretables which were kept in constant use until the midnight hour. It is not necessary to state that during the games which followed, that "jokers were discarded," "left-bowers taken up," or, that anyone present ask: "can you play spades?" The refreshments which consisted of a handsome large cake decorated with seventy-five candles, (representative of Mr. Crowl's age), chicken sandwiches, pickles, coffee, ice cream and candy, could not have been surpassed by the finest to be found on the royal table in a king's palace. On behalf of those in attendance, we desire to thank the ones who had spared no means in giving them such a superb entertainment, and to wish Mr. Crowl many more happy birthday celebrations. Those present to enjoy such a supremely agreeable affair were: C. C. Austin, George Thorne, William Sidenstricker, James Johnston, Allen Davis, Edward Stuck, Allen Edwards, Oliver Watson, F. W. Dinwiddie, John Anthony, Margaret Crowl, Inez Grikes, Dorothy Hook (nee Crowl) and Martha Jeffries and daughter.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

PRAY BELIEVING—And all things whatsoever ye shall ask in prayer, believing, ye shall receive.—Matthew 21:22.

GOING TO COLLEGE

In former years young folks who attended schools of college grade were looked on as highly learned people, climbing heights of scholarly achievement to which few could aspire. Ordinary folks looked at them with a certain awe. When they returned from vacations, they were greeted as distinguished citizens.

Today going to college has become commonplace. So many are doing it, that many educators say there are too many such students. They fear that many of them who have little appreciation of scholarship, and come for other purposes, are not getting their money's worth. Some parents are stinting themselves food and clothes to give their young folks this chance, while these youthful sports are going in for every kind of fun, and making study a secondary consideration. Such ones need to quit and put on overalls, or do some real work.

The young people who this fall are leaving the homes of Ohio to enter upon college courses, should realize the meaning of their act. They are giving the best years of their life to a certain purpose, to acquire knowledge, skill, judgment and training. Their present opportunity will never return. The passing hour never comes back.

If they learn the lessons the world's wisdom has to teach, if they make use of the contacts with brilliant teachers and students, they may accomplish more toward fine success than they would in a life time of ordinary work. But if they undervalue these opportunities, and go in merely for a good time, they will be worse off than comrades who are learning things every day in useful occupations.

College studies will not leave them where they are today. Either they will be prepared for more successful struggle, or they will have dissipated their energies, and be less competent than before. Take your choice, young folks!

MODERNIZING THE HOMES

Roger W. Babson, noted statistician, referred in a recent address to the much discussed question of over-production. "With only 20 per cent of the homes in this country having bath-tubs," he said, "there certainly is no over production of bath-tubs." He held that the difficulty is not due to a lack of money, but to a lack of the circulation of money.

Some observers claim that the American people have spent so much money during recent years for automobiles, radios, and other new facilities of living, that their wants in these respects are as near being supplied as they can be, in the present state of our wealth and prosperity.

But when one considers that only 20 per cent of our people have bath-tubs, and that every family would like one, one gets an idea of what an enormous amount of work yet remains to be done before people are equipped for modern living. Bath-tubs are only one of many facilities that are needed. Millions of people lack automobiles, radios, refrigerators, and labor saving equipment for the homes. The people long for these things and will have them as soon as they can get the money. The problem is to produce the state of prosperity that will permit every industrious and thrifty family to obtain these facilities. In time this ideal will be attained.

If we could only stabilize the industries so they would run regularly, millions of people who still lack these facilities would buy them. While people can get along without modern improvements if they have to, yet the modern devices lighten toil and save time, so that they contribute to the general progress of the community.

The great achievement of the 19th century was to open up the unsettled parts of our country and build modern methods of communication, and the great task of the 20th century is to modernize its homes.

An embarrassing consequence of recognizing the new government of Argentina, which is friendly to this country, would be a demand for most-favored-nation treatment from the new government of Peru, which has just ousted a pro-American regime.

The WAY of the WORLD

By GROVE PATTERSON

SENSIBLE SPEED

We criticize speed. We condemn the motorist who goes very fast and even look doubtfully at the railway company that puts its trains in a breath taking schedule. But there is one kind of speed that is sensible. It is the speed of airplanes. Up there the driver has no bad roads, no curves, no traffic signals, no ditches. As Capt. Hawks, who crossed from Los Angeles to New York in a little more than twelve hours, points out, speed adds to safety. Flying at 150 or 200 miles an hour, one can escape storms. He can hop off when he knows a storm is coming—and be there before it hits him. The next move is for the plane makers. Let them get busy and produce more 200-mile-an-hour planes—and 300-mile-an-hour ones, too.

BASIS OF PEACE

John W. Davis, one of the country's ablest lawyers, holds up the unification of international law as the basis of world peace. Sounds fine. But when two nations go to war laws are forgotten. Out come the submarines, the poison gas, the attacks on hospitals and unfortified cities. It always has been so. It will be so. Wars will never be fought by law, even in the prize ring—where fouts seem to be the principal order of the day.

No—peace must come through getting people to think differently. Peace comes from teaching history to children in the right way. We shall always have war so long as we continue to glorify war.

KINDNESS

A little girl in Cedarville, Ill., dreamed of living in a fine house in the midst of poor streets and poor people—and inviting in all her neighbors to have a good time. Strange idea! The little girl with the dream became Jane Addams, Hull-House, in the midst of the slums, became a place of love and loveliness for the poor, the miserable, the unhappy. And so it is today. Jane Addams, just past 70, presides, carries on.

Is there ever great success without a dream? And is there ever great enterprise that does not rest on the basis of honest kindness and the wish to help others?

PRAYERS FOR RAIN

"No imaginable connection exists between a man's inward spiritual attitude and a rainstorm." So says the able Dr. Fosdick, New York's foremost preacher. Too bad the child mind persists so long into middle life that there are people who believe God is a kindly or sometimes angry old gentleman who sits in a big chair and pulls levers. Anyone who thinks the Creative Force interferes with the natural laws by which the universe is operated has a pitifully small conception of God.

Who is the most popular person in the world?

This question cannot be answered properly, since the answer must be entirely a personal opinion. Undoubtedly many persons in the United States would cast their vote for Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh.

Writer's Ethics

Is it all right for me to send the same article to three different magazines at the same time and accept pay from all three of them? One seldom is able to get immediate acceptance by three magazines of the same article, but it is ethical to sell to only one, if all three should desire the article.

PASSING OUT

NEW YORK CITY, New York.—A newspaper man asked Pop to pick the twenty best horses of 1930. And what do you think he said. He couldn't do it.

"There aren't that many," quoth the veteran. "I doubt if there is a first class race horse in America today, he continued. "They've raced out all the good two-year-olds. Instead of being in their prime at three or four years, a horse at that age today is either spent, or in stud."

INSURANCE

Somebody told me to be sure and get a copy of the current Mercury and read Abe Epstein's expose on the "Insurance Racket."

Having my name in pale blue ink on the front piazza of a ten thousand dollar, individual policy. Whole Life plan, I swapped four bits for a copy of Hank Mencken's justly celebrated periodical, took it home, donned my pajamas, lighted a wild-onion panettella and settled down in the club chair for a twenty-minute cookstove through a financial sewer.

I was bitterly disappointed. Instead of showing up the "Insurance Racket," as he calls it, my friend Abe has given it a boost that left me wondering why I had so long deferred taking out insurance.

I learned that in 1928, nineteen officers in my company, drew a total salary of $819,000. That same year, the President of the company, then its vice-president, drew $175,000, while his son, as assistant-treasurer, received $25,000.

"It would seem," says Abe, "that insurance executives have not only an infallible eugenic patent, but that their children, like the Prince of Wales, know how to choose their parents."

I don't know anything about that. What I do know is that the average policy holder knows how to choose his company; and every time I think that I was astute enough to select a company to insure my life, the President of which is so canny a gentleman as to command the salary he does, I'm tempted to run around and increase the amount of the policy.

Nobody raises the price tag a man pins on his own coat tail—not even that of the President of an Insurance Company.

QUESTION OF SENATE'S RIGHT TO PROBE CAMPAIGN FUNDS WARMLY DISPUTED BUT COURT HAS NEVER DECIDED MATTER

WASHINGTON—As supposedly with no popular nominations what expert a commentator on governmental problems as ex-President Coolidge believes the U. S. supreme court has held definitely that it is none of the senate's business how the states permit candidates for seats in its chamber at the capitol to finance their primary fights.

The ex-president recognizes that "evil practices in making nominations should be prevented and punished," but adds that "that is not the function of the senate." The question has been hotly disputed in recent years. No one denies the senate's right to probe the election of an applicant for admission to its membership when he presents his credentials. It has been vigorously denied, however, that he is answerable for the circumstances of his nomination except to the proper authorities of his own home state.

IT IS ON THIS GROUND that the "Nye senatorial slush fund committee" has been so much criticized, just as a similar committee under the then Senator James A. Reed's chairmanship was criticized in the 1920's. Both committees were named to dig into senate candidate's nomination expenses. The candidates have had to submit, being certain that otherwise a majority of senators would vote against seating them even though they might be elected and there is no way under heaven of compelling the senate to seat anyone whom a majority of its members vote not to seat. Nevertheless, many folk have declared that the committees' proceedings are outrageous, unconstitutional and in complete disregard of the individual states' inalienable prerogative to run their respective primaries to suit themselves.

TO BE SURE the committees' defenders point out that there will have to be laws limiting primary expenditures, considering the vast amounts which some senate aspirants have been spending of late, but ex-President Coolidge's pooh-poos this suggestion, saying: "After the supreme court decision that jurisdiction over nominations rests with the states, an investigation of them under the fiction that it is for the purpose of future legislation is a questionable use of authority. The only flaw in the ex-president's reasoning is that there has been no such supreme court decision. Mr. Coolidge evidently has in mind the Truman H. Newberry case. That must be the one, for it is the only case in which the supreme court has touched on the senatorial primary issue. It is true enough that it was almost the kind of a decision the Northamptonian thinks it was—but not quite.

WHAT THE SUPREME COURT did do was to set aside a verdict against Senator Newberry under the corrupt practices act of 1910, on the ground that the act obviously was not meant to apply to senate primaries, for here were no senate primaries at the time the act was passed. Senate primaries began with the Seventeenth amendment's adoption. Previously senators were chosen by their respective state legislatures.

THE DECISION was rendered by a divided court—five to four. Of the five justices who held in Senator Newberry's favor, four went even farther than to find for the senator; they stated that the Seventeenth amendment itself failed to give the senate jurisdiction over primaries. Evidently it was thus that ex-President Coolidge fell into the error of assuming that, according to the supreme court, "jurisdiction over nominations rests with the states."

Four justices did, indeed, so hold—but not the five needed to make a majority. Justice McKenna (now dead), the fifth of the pro-Newberry five, handed down a separate opinion, endorsing the setting aside of the verdict against the senator, but explaining that, as to the question of the senate's "jurisdiction over nominations" under the Seventeenth amendment, he maintained an open mind—the Newberry case did not call for a decision on that point; hence, until required to decide it, he was not doing so.

ACCORDINGLY, upon the issue of the Seventeenth amendment's extension of the senate's authority over primaries, the supreme bench tied, four to four, with Justice McKenna not voting. The controversy never has been settled. There simply is no federal law regulating primary expenditures and practices. The senate is, in fact, working toward one now, just as the "slush fund committees" defenders argue. Several bills are pending, with an offering by Senator Cutting, of New Mexico, perhaps, the best known.

IN ANY EVENT, law or no law, if the senate refuses to accept a new member, its refusal is final. If it chooses, it can bar a senator-elect whose mere looks it dislikes. He may be perfectly satisfactory to his own state, which is all right as far as it goes—but, after all, he has a voice in making laws for 47 other states. The controversy never has been settled. HOUSEHOLD HINTS

By MRS. MARY MORTON

MENU HINT

Raisin Bread Buttered
White Bread Marmalade
Sandwiches
Rye Bread Cheese Sandwiches
Frosted Cakes Tea Salted Nuts

This menu is intended for Sunday afternoon tea. The raisin bread is buttered and arranged on the plate English fashion. English biscuits or American cookies may replace the frosted cakes if you prefer. The tea is served with both lemon and cream, although milk is really more English than cream.

Today's Recipes

Little Cakes—Three-fourths cup butter, one cup sugar, three eggs, one-half cup milk, two cups cake flour, two teaspoons baking powder, vanilla. Cream butter, sugar and eggs. Add baking powder and flour sifted together alternately with the milk. Add the vanilla and bake in little forms, putting only one teaspoonful in each. Bake fifteen minutes in oven first hot (400 degrees Fahrenheit) and then moderate (350 degrees Fahrenheit).

Uncooked Fudge Frosting—Three cups confectioners' sugar, one-fourth cup (4 tablespoons) cocoa, two tablespoons butter, one teaspoon vanilla, three tablespoons milk or four tablespoons cream, sugar and cocoa and sift together. Cream butter until very soft and stir in one-third of sugar mixture. Add milk or cream and vanilla. Beat well and stir in the rest of the sugar and cocoa mixture.

Raisin Bread—One cup rye meal, one cup corn meal, one cup Graham flour, three-fourths tablespoons soda, one teaspoon salt, three-fourths cup molasses, two cups sour milk or one and three-fourths cups sweet milk or water, one cup raisins. Sift rye meal and corn meal, add Graham flour, soda and salt, then add molasses and milk. Stir until well mixed, add raisins, stir thoroughly, turn into greased baking powder cans and cover tightly. Put on rack in kettle of boiling water and steam two to three and one-half hours.

Baby Needs More Water

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

The baby needs far more water than the adult. This means, of course, in proportion to body weight. Pounds for pounds the baby uses three times as much water.

Some of the most serious diseased conditions of infancy are due to excessive loss of water from the body—dehydration as it is called. The reason for the baby's need for water is that its energy goes on at a faster pace, and the water is needed to increase the heat output, doing this by evaporation. For this reason, the very best thing as symptomatic treatment for a baby's fever is water.

When an infant has a severe diarrhea the water loss is very great on account of the watery stools, and one of the imperative things in the treatment of the condition is to get water inside the baby somehow. Vomiting results in the same thing. Since the baby cannot retain water given by mouth in these conditions, it has to be given by the doctor or nurse hypodermically.

Lack of enough water in the baby's diet prevents a normal gain in weight. In diarrhea and vomiting conditions, where there is a loss of water above the intake, a rapid loss of weight occurs, and this results in the most serious symptoms.

Another factor of the utmost importance in infancy is the supply of well known vitamins. A generous supply of all the vitamins is absolutely necessary for the baby's proper health and development. The adult can get along with a moderate supply of a few of the vitamins. Furthermore, the average adult diet is more likely to contain generous supplies of the vitamins than the infant's.

Mother's milk contains all vitamins except possibly E, but may be deficient in "A" and "D" and even others, depending upon the diet of the mother. Cow's milk has more "B" than mother's milk usually. But in the case of colic, pasteurization or boiling destroys large amounts of the vitamin necessary vitamin "D", and process of autoclaving milk as condensed milk, entirely destroys it. Hence, for artificially fed baby the addition of vitamin "D" is visible in the form of orange juice.

Mothers who are nursing babies should eat plenty of fresh fruit and vegetables in order to assist the vitamin "D" content of the milk. Likewise vitamins "A" and "C" should be added to the food of artificially fed infants, and possibly many of those who are breast fed. If the nursing mother eats enough green vegetables, butter and egg it is probable her milk contains enough vitamin "A". Vitamin "C" can easily be supplied in the form of cod liver oil.

Another thing the baby, or in place the nursing mother, should have in the diet is pigment. It is used in blood building. It can be obtained in spinach and carrots, and the yolk of eggs.

(EDITORS NOTE: Dr. Clending cannot diagnose or give personal answers to letters from readers. Where questions are general interest, however, they will be taken up, in order, in the daily column. Address your queries to Dr. Logan Clending, care of this paper. Write legibly and not over 200 words.)

Marry, Lovers Advised

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

"Dear Virginia Lee: My question is an old one. Three years ago I met the only man in the world for me. He is about two years younger than I, but we both feel that this does not make any difference, as we love each other sincerely. My fiancé is an only son with one sister.

"Until last year his family liked me very well. When we planned to be married last fall they turned against me. They said I was too young to make them dislike me, and don't know why they do. They are doing everything in their power to keep him away from me. He feels he owes his family some consideration, and rightly so, but the question is—how much?"

"Is it right for a mother, for no reason, to try to break up the happiness of two people who are as much in love as we are? We are both almost crazy over the whole thing. He loves me and wants to do everything to make me happy, and I feel the same way about him. I can't ever be happy with anyone else. We had planned to go away and be married next week. Are we going right? Or should I give him up in favor of his mother? I know that he can't be entirely happy as long as she acts the way she does, and she will never forgive him if he marries me. What shall we do?"

"Euse."

If your fiancé loves you as much as he thinks he does he will go right ahead and marry you. He must realize that his mother is a very selfish woman to try to spoil your happiness. It probably isn't that she dislikes you personally. She would act the same way no matter who threatened to take her darling son away from her.

Marry next week or the week after, or any time that suits you. Why should your lover give up the girl he loves just because of his mother? If there is no other good reason? She can't live forever, and even if she did, he needs a companion his own age, a home apart from hers, and children.

Do everything you can to show her that you will be an affectionate daughter to her, and don't worry about the matter any more than you can help if she doesn't give in at once. The chances are that when she finds that her boy is married and no longer under her dominion she will become reconciled to the marriage and in her heart will respect her son much more than if he had sacrificed himself and the girl he loved for her selfish whim.

"Dear Virginia Lee: I am a constant reader of your column and read 'Sad and Blue's' letter.

"I am a young woman with two children. I loved my husband dearly until a year ago this month. He was a terrible drinker and ran around with other women, but I stayed with him because I loved him. He came home one evening and had been drinking and started quarreling. I kept still, and that seemed to anger him more until I went into the other room, then he grabbed and choked me.

"Well, that ended it. He left and I haven't seen him but once since I obtained a divorce because I couldn't stand such cruelty.

"I haven't been able to get on and work much because the baby is little yet, and my mother isn't able to care for them, but we make the best of things.

"I don't know what the trouble was, unless he didn't want the responsibility of a family, because I did everything that was in my power to keep our home together, but he wasn't satisfied, and I think that was the trouble with 'Sad and Blue's' wife. She wasn't satisfied. You see the more you do for a people the less they appreciate it, and I think the best is to let them go.

"Tell 'Sad and Blue' if he will ask Truth to help him in this matter he will be comforted. I am writing to show that everybody has their trials and tribulations.

Thank you very much, A. B. C. Life seems cruelly hard at times, doesn't it? I am glad you are finding a way out of your trouble, and hope that the dear children will be your greatest comfort.

Brown Eyes: I think that was a pretty fishy story your boy friend told about that girl, if you ask me. Brown Eyes, I think—I really do—that you'd better listen a little, at least to what your mother says. Nineteen is pretty young to marry, but it's a good deal better than 16.

Electricity Removes Whiteheads

By GLADYS GLAD

Milia, or whiteheads, are far more difficult to treat than pimples. They are hard, whitish kernels of oil deep under the skin, and will not disappear as rapidly, under proper care, as a mild pimply condition.

Whiteheads are the symptoms of sluggish, unhealthy skin. Exercise to stimulate the circulation of the blood, is a necessary step in the prevention and cure of these blemishes. It will wake your skin from its lethargy and force it to resume its normal activity.

Whiteheads are also caused by a temporary closing of the pores because of improper cleansing of the face.

My contention, however, is that milia is the first sign of a sub-normal skin, and that its origin can be traced to some unhealthy condition of the body. If the body is in perfect condition the skin will function healthily. It will throw off from the pores almost any dirt that accumulates and without the appearance of pimples or any other skin remedies.

Therefore, the wisest course to pursue, in eradicating these blemishes, is to get at the root of the trouble, even if it necessitates a visit to a physician.

Of course, local treatment of milia will help tremendously, but you must bear in mind that the same condition will reappear if you are the least bit careless in the cleansing of your skin.

The quickest way to rid yourself of milia is to have them removed by the electric needle. The whitehead will be eliminated in one treatment. Then you have only to put a bit of antiseptic on the spots, and in a few days all trace of them will have vanished.

Another method of treating whiteheads is to scrub the face with a bland soap and a com-

A number of Xenians, including Charlie Weaver, Postmaster C. S. Frazer and others, left for Lexington, Ky., Wednesday morning for the Grand Circuit harness meet to see how Ray Henley, three-year-old pacing speedster, trained by Joe Hagler, this city, can perform in fast company.

Ray Henley, who has a record of having won twenty-three consecutive heats this year over the twice arounds without being headed to the wire, has been entered in the 2:15 and 2:18 class events and was scheduled to race in the former class, for which seventeen pacers have been nominated, Wednesday afternoon.

The performance of the juvenile in a field of Grand Circuit pacers will be watched with interest. Ray Henley's best time for the mile is 2:08, chalked up at the recent Geneva County Fair, but he should clip several seconds off this record on a mile oval.

Wilberforce University's football practice reached the scrimmage stage last Saturday and Coach Graves has been sending his griders through some exceptionally stiff workouts. He has divided his big squad into four teams, giving every candidate an opportunity to show his talent. The "Force" is pointing for its opening game to be played at Wilberforce October 4 with Bluefield Institute, of Bluefield, W. Va., as the opponent.

During the open golf championship at Interlachen, where the heat and the strain were killing forces, one of the star golfers quit playing before the end of his first round. "What's the trouble?" somebody asked.

A sudden gleam came into his eyes. "I took three puts on the first green," he said. "I took three on the second green. I was hitting the ball fine but I took three puts on the third green. I missed just one shot from ten to green for those first nine holes, but I was out in 44—eight over par."

"I took three puts on the tenth green. Then I played a chip shot on the eleventh and it ran over the green into a trap. My brain reeled. I knew if I took three puts on another green I'd either cut my throat with a mashie-niblick or jump into one of these lakes. I was getting goofy. I could hear funny noises. So I picked up and quit to keep from going crazy."

This example of golfing brain-storm is told in Collier's as an illustration of how many golfers at the end of a hard tournament campaign are as punch-drunk as boxers. The strain of trying to concentrate through one hard round after another and the inability to sleep at night are the things that affect them most seriously.

Two prominent Xenia lawyers had a marathon miniature golf match all their own recently at Lawrence John's semi-private, nine hole links in the rear of his N. Galloway St. home.

Attorneys Frank Johnson and Charlie Darlington started out to play two rounds one evening and were all square at the end of eighteen holes. They played nine more holes and were still even. Four more rounds were played and at the end of each round their score cards showed an identical number of holes won. Finally, on the eighth round, Johnson beat his opponent after seventy-two holes of pigmy golf.

BOWLING

Extending its winning streak to nine straight games, the champion Greene County Lumber Co. bowling team lengthened its lead in the Recreation League to two full games by winning three games in a row from the Xenia Shoes Tuesday night. The league leaders recorded games of 935, 940 and 856 for a 2,731 total. Ben Dice, with a series of 591, and Peterson with 583, topped the winners. Birk led the losers with 526. Box score:

CRAIG AND M'KAY IN SEMI-FINALS

W. Crawford Craig and S. M. McKay won their way to the semi-final round in the annual championship golf tournament at the Xenia Country Club by winning their first round matches over the weekend.

Craig eliminated Dr. T. F. Myler, 4 up and 2 to play, and McKay defeated John Davidson, 5 and 4.

Craig will meet McKay in the semi-finals and the winner will face Jack Barlow in a thirty-six hole match to decide the 1930 champion golfer at the club. Barlow has already progressed to the final round by virtue of winning two matches.

KOGUT WINS FEATURE MATCH IN OPENING EAGLES' MAT SHOW

Substituting for Earl Hanson, the Kansas City mauler, an Indianapolis heavyweight named Williams proved no match for Jack Kogut, Dayton, in the headliner of the first of a series of weekly wrestling shows sponsored by Xenia Aerie, No. 1683, Fraternal Order of Eagles, at the Opera House Tuesday night.

Kogut won the main go in two straight falls, pinning Williams' shoulders to the mat the first time in fourteen and one-half minutes and winning the second fall in only seven minutes.

In the semi-final bout, Earl Smith, coach of Troy High School and a promising welterweight, overcame Earl Hassen, Columbus, in twenty-eight minutes. This match had a scheduled thirty-minute limit and was decided by one fall.

The curtain raiser of the evening between "Speed" Crawford, local colored youth, and a Dayton boy, Bill Kessler, provided the most action of any of the bouts, Crawford wrestling his opponent to the mat in nine minutes with an "airplane slam." Crawford weighed 130 pounds and Kessler, two pounds less.

The show attracted more than 200 fans, including a large number from Dayton and adjoining cities.

CINCINNATI WILL RELY UPON SOPHOMORES FOR GRID ELEVEN

By JOSEPH K. RUKENBROD
International News Service Staff Writer.

CINCINNATI, O., Sept. 24.—Coach George Babcock is another mentor in the Buckeye Athletic Conference who is depending on sophomore material to strengthen a rather weak football aggregation. The University of Cincinnati's 1930 eleven has all the promise of being better than last season's team, but it will not be regarded as a serious threat in the conference unless the unusual happens.

The Bearcats open the season against Cedarville, always an easy foe, September 27, in a night game. Coach Marvin Borst, former Wittenberg College star, has practically the same team which held the Bearcats to a 19-0-0 score last year and a stiff battle is anticipated for the lid-fitter.

The "warner system" is expected to play an important part in Cincinnati's 1930 campaign, as Assistant Coach Dana King, backfield mentor, recently returned from a school on football strategy which was conducted by Glenn S. "Pop" Warner at Northwestern University. Special attention to "wing back" and "spinner" formations was stressed by the famous Stanford coach.

Coach Babcock and his aides are confronting the job of building an entire new team, with very few good lettermen returning. A few sophomores, however, have shown up good in practice and many of the second-year men are expected to lead permanent berths.

There are too many new men on the Bearcat roster who have possibilities for a judgment to be made but it is general belief that Cincinnati will not fare much better than it did last year with Ohio Wesleyan, Ohio and Miami holding the limelight.

Babcock will undoubtedly have a beefy line with such newcomers as Phil Collins and Swede Jensen at tackle, Hansen and Meiers at guard, and other heavy prospects. Hansen, who hails from Wyoming, weighs 226 pounds. Jensen tips the beams at 210 and Collins weighs 195. Other line possibilities are Bacon, 195 pounds; Brown, tackle, 175; Ballam, tackle, 204; Parker, guard, 170; and Dann, guard, 219 pounds.

There is also a number of lighter boys from last season's squad who will have the fight and all that goes with it to make it a real Bearcat forward wall.

Stipple seems to be the logical man for the center post.

The Bearcat Backfield will be light but it will be fast and shifty and the three leading contenders for the title, Ohio, Wesleyan and Miami, should not take Cincinnati too lightly. It is a cinch that Babcock's team will not be as slow as last year.

Just as Denison is depending on its sophomores, so will Cincinnati be reliant on its graduates from the yearling squad.

SHARKEY READY TO MEET CAMPOLO

By HYPE IGEOE
I. N. S. Sports Writer

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—Jack Sharkey is all fit and ready to go. He has maintained that that was his condition right along, and now the doctors of the boxing commission have put the final O. K. on Jacques of Boston.

So nothing but an earthquake, a hurricane or a cloudburst can stop Jack from trying to make good his promise of knocking out Victorio Campolo in the Yankee stadium on Thursday night in five rounds.

It didn't seem like the old blustering Sharkey who submitted to that physical examination yesterday afternoon, as per orders of our noble boxing commission. Jack was complacent, obliging, and answered questions without putting on the old sneer.

The doctors rounded up Jack into a room, made him strip and do highland flings and everything, and Jack was just as obliging as a trained puppy. Then they put their stethoscopes and blood pressure machine on the robust and pudgy muscles of the American heavyweight champion.

Made him say "ah-h-h" and thumped his sides and his tummy, and when they got through with the twenty-minute examination, called the newspaper boys in and put their O. K. on the Boston man.

"There is no reason why Sharkey cannot put up the best fight of his life," said Dr. Joseph Baldwin. "Sharkey is physically perfect and there isn't a physical defect in his makeup."

N. Y. STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—After holding steadily for the greater part of the forenoon, the stock market broke sharply, again under the impact of a sharp and vicious bear drive, directed principally against the industrial favorites. The bears took their cue from the further decline in wheat prices and the unwillingness of outside traders to come into the market, but most of the damage was done in stocks which furnish ground for the activity of the professionals on the floor of the exchange.

The bears pounced on Vanadium and forced that stock down about 8 points to 7½ before any indication of a rally was seen. Westinghouse dropped off 5 points to 135½ and Case Threshing lost 5 points. After reaching 163½ in the forenoon, U. S. Steel was caught in the selling wave and was forced back to 160½. In the same period United Aircraft reacted 5 points to 48½ and Radio was pounded down to 33½. Anaconda Copper was again under fire and retreated to 39½ for a loss of nearly 3½ points, as rumors of possible omission of the dividend flooded Wall Street. American Can, the morning's favorite at 126½, fell away swiftly to 121½.

The utility stocks, the rails, oils and amusements were caught in the sharp downward move, though as a rule losses were comparatively small. Auburn Auto lost 5 points at 107½ and General Motors sold under 42. The bears were not as successful in this raid as in some of their recent attempts to upset the market, and after a half-hour's shake-out the market favorites started to dig themselves out.

The shocked silence with which Gordon greeted this announcement was broken by a low exclamation; looking across the room, Kitty saw Edith staring at her as if she were a ghost. Then she turned her eyes back to the man who had flouted her.

In her heart was a little triumph a little fear, and a great amazement. It did not seem possible that she had told that outrageous lie. Swiftly justification came to her; of course she was to be married, some day, to some one. She had not said when or to whom! Yet the implication was too plain for her to comfort herself with sophistry. To Gordon it was an announcement that she was going to be married as soon as she could leave the office; as soon as the last kidnapper was identified.

It was so that she had intended it—that is, if it were really she who had said those words, and not some contrary spirit suddenly invading possession of her. She looked calmly at the devastation she had wrought. Gordon's face was pale and set. She saw his eyes increase their hunted, trouble look and become sick with pain; watched the blood drain from his face, saw him spread his hands with a hopeless gesture—and turn away.

And all her heart cried out after him—"It's a lie. It's not true! It is you I love—Gordon, Gordon." But her lips were silent.

He turned away like an old man, half tumbled once as if he were going to speak, then passed through the door.

Kitty turned blindly to find Edith beside her.

"Who?" she asked, her pale face livid.

Kitty looked at her in the eyes, then up and down. This, at least, she had not to endure. Kitty had her triumph—she had taken Gordon from the girl who loved him. Perhaps she had always had him and so possessed the greater triumph. But Kitty saw no reason why she should discuss her lie with her successful rival. She had struck and struck hard—to hurt him, as well as to save her own wounded pride. That it was a blow below the belt, a cowardly blow because a lie, she did not think. Her words were instinctive.

"But—but I must know!" cried Edith. Kitty wondered if her words too, were instinctive. Was the pale, thin girl jealous? Was she not sure of the man? She looked at her again. Suddenly indignation went out of her. It was not possible to be angry with this pitiful wreck of what once might have been a lovely girl. So said, so hopeless was her face—how could a woman look so, who had Gordon for a lover? Surely she must be mad not to radiate happiness.

Kitty spoke gently, but with finality. "I don't wish to be rude to you," she said composedly. "But it is surely obvious that I spoke to Mr. Platt, thinking we were not overheard. I am sure you will not ask any questions concerning a matter that is wholly my own business."

She turned away. Edith murmured something—it sounded familiar. As Kitty walked out of the room she wondered. Could she be mistaken, or had Edith said, once as before, "Oh, no wonder, no wonder!"

From the sublime to the ridiculous, from the great to the small, from the tragic to the ludicrous—life is like that. Kitty paused beside Hilda's desk at an outstretched hand.

"Have you heard," she gasped. "The heavens are about to fall. New York is going to topple into the river and I am about to be Empress of Japan!"

"Really?" smiled Kitty, wondering what the blond girl could mean. "Actually! Goss has invited me—us—you—all of us, to go on a picnic!"

"Really!"

"Can't you say anything but 'really'?" demanded Hilda. "It's the first time on record the old man had taken any notice of the office! Sure, he's chartered a yacht, we are going down the bay, then he'll be a band and no one is permitted to refuse! See here!"

She handed over a printed letter. It set forth the facts as Hilda had stated them; the day was a week off.

"Can you imagine it?" she cried again. "Oh, let him wait!" as an impatient buzz sounded from her switchboard. "And see here," she pointed to a line. "Employees may bring each one guest if they so desire."

"That means Spike!" went on Hilda. "Who will you ask?"

"I—why—oh, I don't think I'll go!" answered Kitty, saying the first thing that came into her head. "Oh, you've got to go!" answered Hilda. "See, it says 'attendance mandatory'."

"Really."

"You and your 'really,'" cried Hilda. "Ask your pet boy friend!"

He was a sport and let's all be merry at Goss' expense for once in our lives! If you haven't got a boy friend you want, tell me and I'll get you one!"

Kitty discussed the coming event with Sally that night. She had made up her mind not to go—what could 'attendance mandatory' mean to her, who was about to leave? She had no heart for gaiety and certainly none for an excursion on which Gordon Platt and Edith would be present!

But she had forgotten that so many of her own friends would go—friends who took it as a matter of course that she would be present. "Atlee and I have talked it over," explained Sally. "I, Atlee and you will ask Baby. I will ask Joe, and you can ask Bert or Fatty, as you please—Oh, of course, Kitty darling, you can ask any one! But we thought of we had our own little crowd we'd have more fun."

Kitty accepted the inevitable. How could she hurt her friends? She couldn't explain why she did not want to go. She could hardly plead another engagement. Certainly she could not plead work. Of course, she could 'get sick' at the last moment, but as she was never known to be ill it would look to be what it was—an excuse. Besides to be sick at the last moment would be to spoil the day of who ever she asked.

So she decided to go although she looked forward to it with no pleasure. Because he had been so much to her as a cavalier and rescuer, rather than any special reason.

from an infectious disease.

4. Ask for the cooperation of the police department to see that the children from the third grade are kept at home.

Your truly, Dr. T. F. Myler

In compliance with the request of Dr. Myler the third grade was dismissed and the following letter was sent to parents by James D. Adair, president of the city board of education:

September 24, 1930.

Dear Parent:

Since your child was exposed to a case of infantile paralysis, the third grade pupils from Miss Douthett's room, McKinley Bldg. are being dismissed for one week.

Please keep your child home during this week and do not allow neighbor children to come to your home to play.

The child should not be taken to picture shows, Sunday School or any other place.

If your child shows any signs of illness, loose bowels, cold, or change of disposition, have your physician see him at once.

Unless notified to the contrary you are asked to send your child back to school Thursday morning October 2, 1930.

Yours truly,

James D. Adair, Pres. Board of Education.

The Theater

Fifteen years ago the roll of drums and the rattle of guns were broadcasting a strange and deadly symphony throughout war-ridden Europe.

To an eighteen-year-old choir boy from Cardiff, Wales, the weird chant brought an echo of softer harmonies. So he sat at his piano and one day gave the bleeding world a song that it clings to its heart and has not yet given up.

The son was "Keep the Home Fires Burning." The composer was Ivor Novello—the same who now plays music from the stage of the Shubert Theater in New York as he acts in his own play, "Symphony in Two Flats." Shortly after writing the war song he joined the flying corps, saw a year and one-half of actual warfare, crashed and was invalided home.

The war over, Novello seemed to have his career chalked out by music. He is the son of one of Great Britain's most famous voice teachers, but the camera calls him first and Ivor Novello, the singing composer, became one of the great names of the British film world.

To his musical talent, he added acting ability and it was but a short step to the spoken stage. "Old Heidelberg," "Lilom" and "The Rat" were some of the plays that swept the young actor to national fame. The last was filmed and became a sensation on stage and screen almost simultaneously.

That left Novello distinguished as musician, composer, singer and actor, but there was one other art to conquer. He sat down then and wrote himself a comedy called "The Truth Game." London liked the play and clung to it and its author for many months. Then he wrote and acted in "Symphony in Two Flats" and London only relinquished it so that it could be taken, cast and all, to America.

Now there remains only for Ivor Novello the ambition to combine two of his crafts in a single creation. He admits he is to write a book, music and lyrics for an operetta based on G. B. Stern's novel, "Debonair," with himself, perhaps,

BIRDS HELPED BY WATER SHORTAGE

BALTIMORE, Sept. 24.—The numerous flocks of blackbirds now roosting in trees in various residential sections can chirp and flit and flutter about to their heart's content this year much to the annoyance of householders. Every year around this time the birds fly here for an extended stay and just as promptly the fire department responds to requests and routes them to trees in sections where they will create no bother, mainly to those in cemeteries. The requests have been made this year but the birds will remain. The drought made a serious drain on the city's water supply; so serious was the shortage that a municipal ordinance prevents the unnecessary use of water, promiscuous squirting of lawns included. "We can't spare the water," the chief of the fire board announced downtown while the blackbirds were chirping and littering sections uptown.
